FREED OF DEBT, BUT PAYS ALL

ONCE BANKRUPT, D. ROTHSCHILD SETTLES EVERY CLAIM.

Had $2 Left When the Court Rid Him of His Debts-Pald $700,000 in Four Years and Is President of a Bank-Started Anew With a Credit of $50,000.

Seven years ago David Rothschild, who was head of the R. Rothschild Sons Company, which failed in the financial panic of '93 and '94, found that his personal fortune of $2,500,000 had been swept away, that he was penniless and owed nearly $700,000. Although legally freed of his debts by the bankruptcy court, he has paid them all, and is to-day president of the Federal Bank of New York, which was opened about a month ago at 500 Broadway.

Mr. Rothschild's father was a wealthy Cincinnati man, and on his death left $700,-900 in trust for his son, besides bequests of $500,000 to hospitals.

The R. Rothschild Sons Company manufactured woodwork and café fixtures and did an international business, having ouses in London and Paris, factories in this city, Chicago and Cincinnati, and branches in the West and South. The company state and 4,000 men and owned fifty freight cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. David Rothschild was at the head of the company.

In the early nineties, according to Mr. Rothschild, the company, through an unfortunate deal with some lumber men, lost about $400,000. Then came the period of business depression, and the enactment of the Raines law, which crippled the company's business to such an extent that it

David to ecoperate in a Liberal concentration Rothschild disposed of twenty-three pieces | Ministry. of real estate which belonged to him.

None of the merchandise creditors of the company suffered by the failure. The Rothschild brothers found, after everything available had been disposed of, that they still owed $700,000. This was mostly paper held by national banks and indorsed by David Rothschild.

After the Bankruptcy law of 1898 was passed David Rothschild, on the first day of the parliamentary session of 1903. hat it went into force, filed a petition in bankruptcy. In telling of his experience bankruptcy. In telling of his experience, Mr. Rothschild said yesterday:

"Some of the creditors thought I was a fraud and opposed me. I told them that I was on the level and that I would settle every one of my debts if they'd only give me a chance. The lawyers who didn't know me doubted my word. But I had lots of friends—broad-gauged thoroughbreds who believed in me—and they stuck by me."

When he got through with the bankruptcy court, Mr. Rothschild says he had less than two dollars. The first thing he did was to borrow enough money to pay for a railroad ticket to Chicago. His object in going to Chicago was to make a small loan, $50,000, chicket to Chicago. His object in going to Chicago was to make a small loan, $50,000, on no security.

"The man I got that money from," said Mr. Rothschild yesterday, "is known on two continents. I told him that there were several banks in New York that would give me a chance selling bonds. But to do that I had to have capital and without it I was no good. I had no security and told him so, but he had confidence in me.

"He said: You go back to New York and start right in. You can draw on me to $50,000." That was kind, wasn't it? The I had to borrow my carfare back to New York from kim."

With capital beamd him Mr. Rothsenid began to make money rapidly. The first year the return was small, but by degrees it increased. An extensive acquaintance in the Middle West and an expert knowledge of bonds and their value helped him greatly. By one bond deal he cleared $70,000 in fifteen minutes. With his brother he established a victor is about a business under the name of private banking business under the name of D. Rothschild, Company D. Rothschild Company. He engineered consolidation of small street railways in Western cities and to-day is the credit man for three banks in this city.

Once Mr. Rothschild began to make money he started a systematic payment of his debts. At first it was on a small scale, but to each creditor was allotted the money until he had lots of it, but Mr. Bothschild insisted that he only needed nough to live on and the rest should go

It wasn't long before he found that he had an income of $20,000 a year, and a bookkeeper was employed to disburse the money to creditors in monthly installments. To make sure that none of the creditors was forgotten, Mr. Rothschild had this advertisement printed:

All persons or corporations having unpaid claims against the R. Rothschild Sons Company, or against bavid or Louis Rothschild, individually, in connection with the affairs of said company, are requested to present the same for payment. Now Mr. Rothschild finds that all of hi debts have been paid. One of the largest creditors was the Central National Bank, and as a receipt for the cancellation of the debt Mr. Rothschild prizes the following: Mr. David Rothschild, New York, Dec. 8, 1902.

Mr. David Rothschild, New York etty:
DEAN SIB: We are pleased to acknowledge having received, through Mr. Leo Frank, final payment on account of your former indebtedness to this bank, and thank you for the same. Yours respectfully, EDWIN LANGDON, President.

GLADSTONE HOLLOW COWS TIPSY. Two Herds Paralyzed by Eating Apples -Two of the Cows Have Died.

holds of Ulster county, was greatly shocked | bers of the United States Realty and Conrecently by the scandalous conduct of James Graham's cows. Mr. Graham has collection of bovine beauties that would ompare favorably in appearance and disposition with the famous herd of Farmer Morton of Rhinebeck. They have never been known to break a fence rail or to offer violence to a summer boarder. In fact, for mildness and placidity Farmer Graham's cows were models to be held up for the emulation of the entire bovine race.

The good reputation enjoyed by Farmer Graham's cows makes all the more scandalous their recent departure from the ways of virtue. They now stand con-victed of theft and grunkenness. The broke into the orchard of their owner, ground that they knew to be sacred and forbidden to them, and partock of the frost-bitten and fermenting fruit on the ground until eleven of them were dead drunk and the remainder of the herd ludirously tipsy. They showed all the symptoms made (amiliar by the exhibitions of trously tipsy. They showed all the symptoms made familiar by the exhibitions of them in a similar state of inebriety. With them, also, the sobering-up process was just as painful. In fact, two of them died the result of their one and only debauch and several more had to be drawn to the barn, being unable to walk.

The example of Farmer Graham's cows proved contagious. The herd of George J. Elliott, a neighbor, was infected, and five of them were paralyzed by indulgence in decayed and fermenting apples. Others were made tipsy and several acquired a still jag that they carried for several days. What effect the milk given by the tipsy minuals had on the community is not explained but the worst is feared, as a correspondent from that locality writes that "Gladstone Hollow had a glorious drunk" to badiah Newcomb M. ADMITS $12,000 JEWEL THEFT.

HOTEL PORTER PAWNS $3,500 NECKLACE FOR $35.

Belonged to Mrs. W. J. Matheson and Was Stolen From Her Rooms at the Holland House in April-Jewel Case in Porter's Cellar With Little Missing From It.

Patrick Bolan, a porter employed at the Holland House and living at 326 East Thirtyfourth street, was arrested yesterday morning by Detective Sergeants Reap and Holland as he left a pawnshop on the Bowery. Bolan had just pawned for $35 a pearl necklace containing sixty-nine stones weighing in all 248 grains.

The two detectives recognized the necklace as one that had been stolen, with a lot of other jewelry, from the Holland House on April 4, this year. The necklace was valued at $3,500 and was the property of Mrs. W. J. Matheson, whose husband is president of several chemical companies They were staying at the Holland House on April 4, when a leather jewel case containing the necklace and other jewelry all of which are valued at $12,000, was missed. The theft was then reported to the police. who kept it quiet until yesterday.

Bolan when arrested at first said that he found the necklace in a chiffonier in room 235 of the Holland House. He had in his possession an opal ring, a Roman gold ring set with diamonds and a gold seal ring. A search of Boland's home, where he has a wife and three small children, brought to light a number of watches, chains and a case containing four fine razors. One of the watches was the property of James scription says that it was presented to him by the employees of the Missouri Furnace Company in 1882. Mr. Gayley didn't report the loss, which occurred a year ago.

Confronted with this evidence, Bolan confessed to the robbery and said that he had not disposed of any of the contents of the jewel case except two gold watches. He told where these had been pawned and said that case and contents were hidden in a coal bin in the cellar of his house. Detectives found the jewel case there, wrapped up in newspapers.

In it were these articles: Gold clasp, set with three eight-carat itamonds.

Gold neckchain.

Heart-shaped pendant, set on one side with meralds and on the other with diamonds.

Diamond Marquise ring.

Ring containing five opals with diamonds et between.

NEW PLAYS FROM ENGLAND.

MR. HARVEY PRESENTS TWO IM-PORTATIONS WITH SUCCESS.

Cigarette Maker's Romance" and Rouget de Liste" Well Received at the Herald Square-Pathos and Mild Humor Pleasingly Blended in Them

It is just possible that if Martin Harvey had first appeared in the double bill he presented at the Herald Square Theatre last night he might have been able to dispense with a revival of "The Only Way" -a piece that no longer piques curiosity He made an excellent impression last night and with a little prologue, "Rouget de H. Gayley, a guest of the hotel. An in- Lisle," he captured entirely the suffrages of his audience-a large one.

Plays of the "Rouget d. lide" type are not strangers to our boards, and like the short story in fiction usually achieve success. After seeing the wretched garret of the French officer-composer who com-posed the "Marseillaise"—under vastly different circumstances, by the way, or else history errs we recalled "Chatterton;" after seeing the unfortunate composer, dandified, but honorable to the last, we recall "Beau Brummel."

Freeman Wills and Fitzmaurice King are the authors of the pretty sentimental romance woven about the great old patriotic tune of France. The material employed is elementary, but effective. Poor, starving, the composer loves a prima donna. His harsh landlord presses him for the rent. The landlord's daughter is the Little Nell of this improbable tale. Deserted, so he thinks, and hungry, robbed of his beloved fiddle, Rouget dies with the melody he composed throbbing in his ears and the limelight on his wan, weary features It made a hit, Mr. Harvey and Miss de Silva-the good tiny girl of the big, brutal landlord—being recalled many times.

Miss Amy Coleridge was the repentant prima donna—one really wishes to know what parted the lovers—and Fuller Meliish
the father.

Mr. Harvey had a part that suited his gift of delicate notation and limited emotional range. His make-up was conventionally romantic rather than characteristic tionally romantic rather than characteristic of a musical composer.

The play that followed is an adaptation from Marion Crawford's we'l-known novel. It is called "A Cigarette Maker's Romance" and in three acts. We are shown in the central character one not altogether unlike the hero of the curtain-raiser—or was it Mr. Harvey's familiar method? In both plays there is the same episode. A man starving who won't eat; a man who has seen "better days."

"Beau Brummel" again peers over the adapter's shoulder, Mr. Charles Hannan. An unfortunate Russia Count who has lost the memory of his name because of an accident, enjoys the singular delusion that on every Wednesday his friends will call for him and restore him to his exalted position in the aristocratic giving us instead an old-fashioned com-plication with a romantic figure in the per-son of Count Skariating, the cigarette maker.

Of course he loves a cigarette girl; of course the villain is a cousin v ho has usurped his It all swims along on the thrice-greased It all swims along on the thrice-greased rails of goodly tradition and effective curtains. Nor can you criticise an audience for liking and applauding the heroic girl who has her own locks shorn rather than sell the hair of her dead mother—or is it the dead hair of her mother, as they say in good Ollendorfin?

is it the dead hair of her mother, as they say in good Ollendorflan?

Mr. Harvey, courtly, dainty, with a bad memory and in worn, quaint clothes, played with the utmost sincerity and skill. His act endings were capital. He received much applause. So did Miss De Silva. The parts were well apportioned among the company, Mr. Mellish enacting one of his characteristic roles with care.

Percy Austey was a furry villain and Schmidt, an ex-barber and adept at cigarette rolling, was taken by Mr. Haviland. The costumes of fifty years ago in Munich had eraisemblance. Altegether, Mr. Harvey and his clever company were seen at their best.

LOUISE HOMER INDISPOSED.

Can't Sing for a While at the Opera-Was Needed for the Opening Night. Mme. Louise Homer, who for the last two years has been the leading contralto of the Maurice Grau Opera Company, is ill and it is not yet certain when she will be able to appear at the Metropolitan. Mr Grau had arranged for her to sing Emilia in "Otello" at the first performance of the season, on Nov. 24; and she was to have sung in "Carmen" on the following Saturday; but Mr. Grau does not know just when Mme, Homer will be able to appear.

The American contralto is the wife of Sidney Homer, the composer. She has passed her time quietly since the close of the last season preparing herself for the present year. Mr Grau has not yet made any arrangements as to her successor temporarily, as Mme. Hencer does not yet know when she may be able to sing.

He found himself in the same predicament several years ago when Mme. Schu-ment-several years ago when Mme. Schu-mann-Heink came first to this country and after singing ence or twice in the West was not able to appear for two months. Mile, Seygard will probably sing Carmen in place of Mme. Homer.

A partial canvass of the subordinate Democratic leaders in Kings county seems to indicate that a majority of them do not share in Mr. McLaughlin's admiration for David B. It is said that in a Hill and anti-Hill squabble Mr. McLaughlin would find it hard to control more than one-half of the Executive Committeemen for his favorite.

KIPLING'S SUIT UP AGAIN. He Appealed From Judgment in Favor of G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Rudvard Kipling's suit for $25,000 damages against George Haven Putnam and Irving Putnam, constituting the publishing firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, for infringement of copyright and trademark, came up for argument yesterday before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on Kipling's appeal from Judge Lacombe's decision against him.

appeal from Judge Lacombe's decision against him.

John L. Hill, in arguing for Mr. Kipling yesterday, said that at the time the critical sickness of the author in New York and the death of his little girl were exciting intense interest in him and his works, the defendants decided "to shake the tree and get all the apples they could," and that the Brushwood edition followed. He believed the intention was to forestall the sale of the "Outward Bound edition," the authorized edition.

Stephen H. Olin, for the Putnams, said the publishers had attempted no deceit stephen H. Olin, for the ruthalise, each the publishers had attempted no deceit whatever, and that only fifteen sets had borne the elephant's head and autograph, which the plaintiff says were used to give the edition the color of an authorized

The Court reserved decision. TWO HORSES FELL ON HIM. Mounted Policeman Severely Injured Stopping a Runaway.

Mounted Policeman Mead of the West 152d street station, broke his leg and was badly bruised in stopping a runaway horse yesterday afternoon. The horse which was yesterday afternoon. The horse which was attached to an express wagon, gave Mead a quarter of a mile chase before he was caught at Dyckman street and Broadway. The horse's bridle had slipped and Mead had to grab him by the nose. The runaway fell and Mead's horse went down with him. Mead landed under the two horses.

C. L. Fair Estate Here $492,200. The property in this State, left by Charles

The property in this State, left by Charles L. Fair, who was killed with his wife in an automobile accident in France on Aug. 14 last, has been appraised at $492.200 gross and $470,500 net, all in personal property, Mr. Fair having possessed no real estate in New York. A compromise having been effected with the relatives of Mrs. Fair, this property will go to Mrs. Theresa Oelrichs and Mrs. Virginia Vanderbilt, the two sisters of Mr. Fair. Mrs. Vanderbilt has taken out letters of administration on the estate here.
